There's a Chinese city of 14 million you've probably never traded

This guy reads its weather better than the market ever does

67.9% weather win rate. 81.5% on Chengdu. + $10,444 since April

Profile: [https:// polymarket.com/@cmcbrown?via = pavlo-ys0z ...]

Edge → total ownership of one overlooked city - Chengdu

Every degree, both sides, every price - he just reads it better than the market does

Where the money came from:

$2,690 → $3,750 - [Chengdu 35°C, Jun 6] - No at 71.7¢ $874 → $1,499 - [Chengdu 29°C, Apr 19] - No at 57.8¢ $1,016 → $1,632 - [Chengdu 23°C, Apr 27] - Yes at 61.8¢

No 1¢ lottery tickets here - he trades the 50-90¢ range, "Yes" or "No", high band or low, all in the city he owns

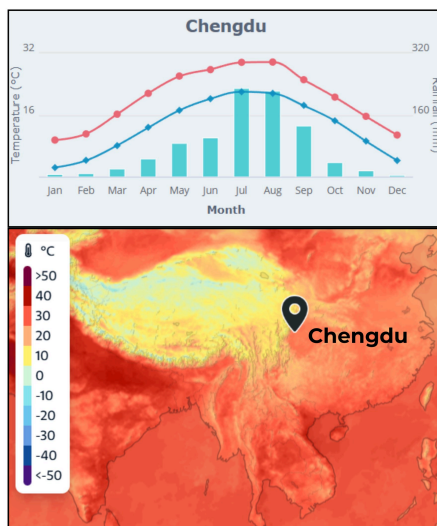

Chengdu first out of everyone, with satellite books in Beijing, Shanghai, Qingdao, Wuhan

Entries spread across every price - this is reading, not spraying

Everyone fights over New York and London. He went and became the best in the world at a city they can't place on a map

The edge was never a strategy. It was a postcode
